Again, pricessor commodities have for years past exhibited a much greater steadings; in relation to silver than they have in relation to gold, showing that the variation is in the latter and not in the Times. former. Had bi-metallism p vailed the strain on gold would have been shared by silver, and although it is probable there would still have been a fall in prices—for both metals combined are hardly sufficient for the extending commerce of the world ago-still the fall would have been a much less serious one and would not have been attend ed by the disturbance of industrial enterprise which has been brought about by adherence to the single gold standard. The object of the bi-metallists is not to secure an increase in the value of silver.

which gold alone is not.

Our net imports last year cost us £315,939,000. whereas if we had paid the same prices for them as in 881, they would have cost us £331.809.000. Consequently the fall in prices last year enabled us to foreigners. Had we got the same prices for our goods have amounted to £223,9-3,000. Their actual value, balance of £9,000,000 was not pure profit, being offset in many ways; but still the fact remains, that the all in prices was by no means so prejudicial to the country as a whole as is commonly represented. The Economist, it will be observed, says the balance it shows is offect in many ways. In fact the figures may be easily grouped in on the Clyde some years ago, and has been runanother way to show a loss instead of the ning on the Atlantic line until taken off to inapochryphal gain which the London organ thus refers to. The text books on political economy teach us that country's commercial prosperity is to gauged by the excess of its imports over it exports, the said balance being the country's D. Sassoon, Mr. C. P. Mr. Webber (from the office of Mr. Ewens) appeared for the complainant. The complainant said she resided at No. 11 Gage-street. On Wednesday evening, between seven and eight o'clock, she was going along Queen's-road eastward in her chair. When past the Barrackeshe was suddenly assaulted by the defendant, who passed her in a jinricksha. Without word the man struck her two violent blows on the shoulder with a stick. A gentleman who was in the street stopped him, and they went up to the Palice Station. Complainant said she had known the defendant a considerable time, and had suffered much annoyance from him. In the beginning of July last she was walking on the Race Course with a friend, Miss Gibson, when the defendant came up with a knife in his hand and threatened to kill her. She was afraid the man would carry out his threat, and either kill her or do her l some grievous bodily harm. To keep him from molesting her she had given the man money to the extent of over $3,000.

RIOT AT AMSTREDAM.

AMSTERDAM, 27th July: Serious socialist riots took place here all yesterday, and quiet was only thoroughly restored this morning. The rioters succeeded in erecting barricades; and the police being unable to cope with them, the military were called out, who, after firing repeated velleys, succeeded in dispersing the mobs. The easualties were heavy, 14 being killed and 76 badly wounded, of whom 40 were police.

27th July, Erening. Tranquillity has been restored. The number killed in the riots amounts to 25.

MINING RIGHTS IN MYSORE.

BANGALORE, 28th July. Great dissatisfaction is felt because the Mysore Durbar refused to grant further concessions of land for mining purposes. The Government resolved not to do so till the whole auriferous area of the province has been surveyed and reported on satisfactorily, and the future prospects of the enterprise somewhat ensured In 1880 there were reckless speculations. Men of straw took up concessions haphazard at nominal prices, and made large fortunes by disposing of the same for immense sums to English Companies.

The experiment seems to have been necessary authority reached Aden. "But remembegun because of the success which has attended ber," said Lord Elphinstone, "that Perim is only a glass manufactory established by Spanish Jews to be an outpost; we do not think of making a at Pascha-bagdsche, on the Bosphorus.

During June there arrived, to be discharged at the port of Liverpool, 59 foreign sailing Lieutenant Greig and thirty sappers, accomvessels, with a registered tonnage of 41,685, as panied by Lieutenant Playfair, the writer of compared with 46 British and Colonial sailing the story before us. No opposition of any kind vessels, with a registered tennage of 41,422 tens. A Liverpool paper suggests that this shows "how our trade is going," and the facts are had never abandoned. But the French press certainly significant.

The Paris correspondent of the Times, when he was at Constantinople three years ago, met an English traveller who had been to Batoum and brought back with him sketches of the fortifications which were even then being eracted. there. He was advised to communicate them to entirely owing to their own want of promptitude the English Foreign Office, and did so. It would be interesting to learn what action, if any, was taken by Lord Granville.

When the Court of Session meets in Scotland, all the judges are expected to attend or send an excuse. On one occasion, when Lord Justice Clork was President, a judge did turn up. "Why does he not come?" asked his lordship rather vexed. "Domestic bereavement; has lost his wife." was the answer. "Eh mon!" exclaimed his lordship mollified at once, and relapsing into broad Doric; "that's a gude excuse. I wish we had a' the same."

Most people have been led to look upon "tiffix as a word peculiar to the Anglo-Indian vocabulary. The authors of "Hobson-Jobson," however, refer their readers to a book by Captain Grose, published in 1785, in which "tiffing" is of the existence of an English verb, "to tiff," or "take off a draught," and an English noun, "tiff," a "draught-of liquor." So, after all, "tiffin" is "quite English, you know."

There is a pleasant little story told of a French lady who married an Englishman. The pair settled in France, and Madame introduced her English husband to all her friends who received him with open arms and declared him to be charming. One thing, however, was felt to be a drawback to him. He was very allent, more taciturn even than most of his countrymen, and soon some of his wife's more intimate friends sounded her as to the cause of this continuous silence. "Ah"! said Vadame, lowering her voice to an impressive whisper, "he is always thinking of Locke and Newton." By this happy device of his French wife, Monsieur the Englishman ever afterwards enjoyed a reputation for being constantly employed on some of the most difficult problems that can exercise the human mind, and was treated with proportionate respect and deference.

Key and Rashleigh's year. This is how A.D. 1886 will be remembered in the history of cricket. Bainbridge and Wright did well last year, but their glory is eclipsed. Two hundred and fortythree runs for the first wicket, two individual "conturies" on one side, and 143 runs to one batsman, are "records" which will take a good many 'Varsity matches to surpass, and which will supply a topic of conversation for many a long | ON CALCUTTA .day. Steady as a Rook, moreover, has come to have further significance. To bowl almost unchanged throughout a broiling day, and take five wickets for 72 runs, as the young Australian did on Monday, to repeat the performance next day in the face of Oxford's tremendous score by taking five for 76, and finally to bat for twenty minutes withour making a run, are achievements in steadiness of which any cricketer might well be proud.

of a dog by his master-the ca steamer which was at the time lying in Kingston Harbour, Jamaica. The dog, a fine retriever, generally accompanied his master everywhere, but on this particular day had, through some oversight, been left on board while Captain Mariner and some of the other officers had gone on shore. His first disappointment over, he seemed to settle down quietly enough till he heard the splash of ears belonging to the returning boat, then, before any one could step him, he rushed down the gangway, and, plunging into the water, commenced awimming out to meet it. Poor animal, his one thought was to reach his master. He knew nothing of the danger he was exposing himself to, for the sea was alive with sharks. Captain Mariner saw to his horror one of these ravenous fish coming round the ship and making for the dog, which also caught sight of it and became almost paralysed with four. In an instant Captain Mariner had thrown off coat and boots, and sprung out of the boat to the assistance of his faithful favourite. Everybody shouted to him that he was mad to run such a risk. and that it was better the dog should be eaten by sharks than that he himself should suffer such a fate; but he paid no heed to the warnings, and with a few strokes brought himself beside poor Don, whose head was piteously upraised out of the water, and, seizing him by his shaggy coat, hoisted him into the boat in a moment. A dozen hands were held out to assist the brave rescuer, and not a minute too soon, for as he himself scrambled over the gunwale a gleam of white was seen and two horrid jaws snapped in impotent rage at being disappointed at its prey. It was all done in less time than it takes to describe; and a line was at once thrown out, baited with a Hongkong for Company's Shares 340' per rod silk handkerchief (the only thing they could find), at which the shark, blinded with fury, spapped immediately, and never had sailors greater satisfaction than in despatching the manis told for the first time in the pages of the Asia-tic Quarterly Review by Sir R. L. Playfair—one of the two mon now living -that General Sir W. M. Coghlan has passed away, who can speak with absolute knowledge of all the facts. There is, he declares, not a scintilla of truth in the wellwas entertaining a number of French officers at his hospitable table at Aden, fathomed their intention of occupying Perim next day, and at once sent across and had the English flag boisted. The occupation of Perim was, it seems, advocated by Brigadier Coghlan himself, because a French adventurer one of the notorious Lambert Brothers, had been urging his Government to take it, so as to command the entrance to the Red Sea in case M. de Lesseps ever made his canal. On the 3rd October, 1856, Lord Elphinstone wrote to General Coghlan:- "Your report on Perim is a most interesting one, and I have sent it home by this mail to the Secret Committee, with a very strong recommendation that we may be allowed to occupy the island, which, in the event of the ship canal being ent through the Isthmus of Suez, must become a lace of very great importance." Lieutenant show that the yield of gold from the quartz was | Lamb was sent to make an accurate survey, and General Coghlan quickened the proceedings of the officials at home by reporting that "there is no doubt that the French are looking out for a convenient settlement in this neighbourhood; indeed. I suspect that a French gentleman, now in Aden, has for some months been engaged in an a porcelain manufactory at Constantinople, an examination of the adjacent ports on behalf of the Cronstadt in the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb, all we want is to prevent any other nation from making one." General Coghlan at once sent over was raised by the Arabs, and in fact we merely re-occupied a possession, the right to which we was exceedingly wroth. The story of the dinnerparty of French officers at the Aden Residency was promptly invented, and the outery that followed threatened to interrupt the good relations between the two countries. The French, as Sir R. L. Playfair says, had hoped to obtain possession of it themselves, and "felt that it was | Th. 19 m 11 1 truth of one of Aliph Cheem's most entertaining

POST-OFFICE NOTICES

When Correspondence has been mis-sent or lelayed (both of which are liable to happen occasionally) all that the addresses need do is to note on the cover, Sent to ----, or Received at 7 p.m., or as the case may be, and forward it, without any other writing whatever, to the Postmaster-General. This should be acted on the first time cause of complaint occurs : it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of giving trouble, a course which generally gives more trouble in the end.

The Postal Guide for 1886, revised to date will be found in the Daily Press Directory, p. 385 large edition, p. 701 small edition. This is the only authorised complete Summary of
